

JEFF PRISKORN

COMEDY BIO

Jeff Priskorn is an actor, writer, singer, improviser, musician, director, and producer based in southeast Michigan. Ask Jeff which one of his many "vocations" he enjoys the best and he will reply with a terse, "None. I can't make money doing any of them."

Regardless of earnings potential, Jeff does have a long history on the Michigan comedy scene. Beginning in the mid-1990's, Jeff was one of the founding members of The Loose Change Show, a sketch comedy show that aired monthly on cable for over 10 years, and actually won a few cable access awards, if that means anything to you.

He is also the primary lyricist and vocalist for the seminal Detroit comedy band Curious Jack. Curious Jack has been a radio staple in Detroit, having written a myriad of sports- and issue-related parodies and theme songs for Detroit's (recently departed) #1 afternoon radio show, Stoney & Wojo, on WDFN. Curious Jack recently learned that their music will be featured in an upcoming display at the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame.

Other braggy highlights include producing, directing, and starring in Love & Plutonium, a superhero romantic comedy Jeff co-wrote with his wife. Love & Plutonium has won "Best Feature" at two film festivals. In addition, Jeff has studied improv with the estimable Rich Goteri and others at Second City and Mark Ridley's.

Jeff has appeared in numerous local and regional TV and radio spots, and on stage in musicals, plays and improv groups all over Michigan. He fronts the rock band Mad Rabbit in his spare time. He also enjoys recording his special phone conversations with insipid telemarketers and posting them online.

Jeff is married to actor and writer Jacquie Floyd. The couple currently resides in Troy, Michigan.
